Exposure to loud noises at workplace can lead to unsatisfactory and unsafe environment causing hearing problems. Research indicates that due to excessive noise levels people suffer loss of hearing, tinnitus and other ear conditions.

For occupational hygiene purposes, the sound pressure level is measured to determine noise exposures. Various instruments and techniques may be used. Instruments such as Sound Level Meters are used to determine the noise level. The choice depends on the workplace noise and the information needed. However, the first step is to determine if there is a noise problem in the workplace.

You would need to call us if:

- You experience excessive noise most of the day
- You use powered machinery for more than 30 minutes a day
- A raised voice level is used while in close proximity to others
- You are working in a noisy industry such as manufacturing
